AT THE CROSS

Goin' to school with daddy. Dr. Wahl and daughter, Callie, pose on her first day of college.

Go Vikings! Dr. Wahl and son, Dustin, take in a Vikings game at the Metrodome.

In Loving Memory

Winners as losers.

While students at NWC, Dr. Muska and Dr. Wahl go the extra mile during Homecoming week and dress up for Wednesday's nerd day on Tuesday.

A few special people in life have such a significant impact on the lives of those around them that even people who don't know them directly are touched by their life.

God's timing in calling these people home always seems premature, and the space left void when they leave the earth is immense. The death of Dr. Wade Wahl, psychology professor and director of counseling, has left such a void at Northwestern. For those closest to him and those influenced by him, Dr. Wahl's home-going would always have been too soon - no matter what his age. "The world was a better place with him in it. Now heaven is," said close friend and colleague, professor of psychology, Joe Hanson.

"Preach the gospel always; if necessary, use words." That quote of St. Francis of Assisi framed in Dr. Wahl's office sums up the essence of his life. Dr. Wahl was known for his love of sports, chocolate and Cocoa Puffs, but greater passion was displayed for his Lord, his family, his friends, and his students.

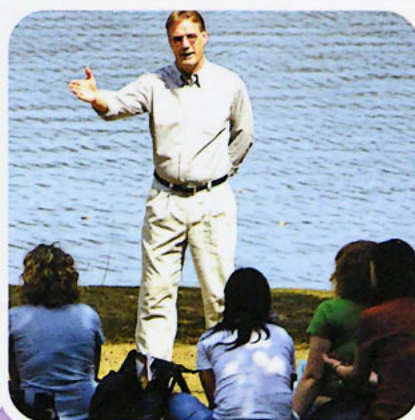

Dr. Wahl is dearly missed by his family, friends and the entire Northwestern community. The 2004 Scroll, "At the Cross," is dedicated to his memory.

Collegiality. Dr. Wahl and Dr. Sprague assist an injured Dr. Simpson to the shores of the Sea of Galilee.

Role Model. Dr. Wahl and his teacher's assistant, Sara Spina, pose after she graduates.

Lake Talk. Dr. Wahl instructs his psychology class down by Lake Johanna, taking advantage of a beautiful Minnesota day.

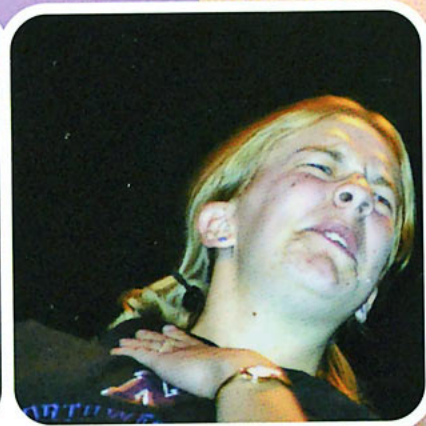

Bibs are for kids. Kim Heuther doesn't mind the mess during NCW's homecoming pep rally.

Didn't your mother tell you not to play with your food? Nate Johnson does just that at the Moyer Open House.

Good thing goldfish don't swim upstream. Christine Peterson's face describes the feeling of a fish swimming down her throat.

Even though we've had students dressed as monks, it doesn't mean that the school is reverting back to the roots of the campus. Students and faculty aren't eating live fish because that's all that Café Naz had to offer, and those taking trips throughout the world didn't win a new grand prize from the admissions office. These things and more are all part of student life at Northwestern College. Moyer's monastery themed open house attracted many students for its free food and annual fun. Eating live fish was part of the pep fest activities during Homecoming week, and summer, fall, and spring mission's trips are a vital part of Northwestern's Christian atmosphere and are integral to the goal of reaching the world for Jesus. Often the most noticed and distinctive feature of student life at Northwestern is the lifestyle statement. Forbidding things like drinking, smoking, and dancing, the lifestyle statement is something that every student has signed, pledging to abide by the standards outlined while a student at Northwestern. The lifestyle statement further sets Northwestern apart from other colleges and displays a willingness to abstain from things that could hinder being an effective witness for Christ. While having fun at things like variety shows, the spring banquet, and Snow Daze, those attending Northwestern strive to glorify God not only in their studies, but also in the way they live their student life.

Who is responsible for this? Anna Herbranson thoroughly enjoys her time on the megaphone. Homecoming pep rally.

AT THE CROSS

Can't say it. Paul Keller wins over the audience while performing his original song "Speech Impediment" at the Fall Variety Show.

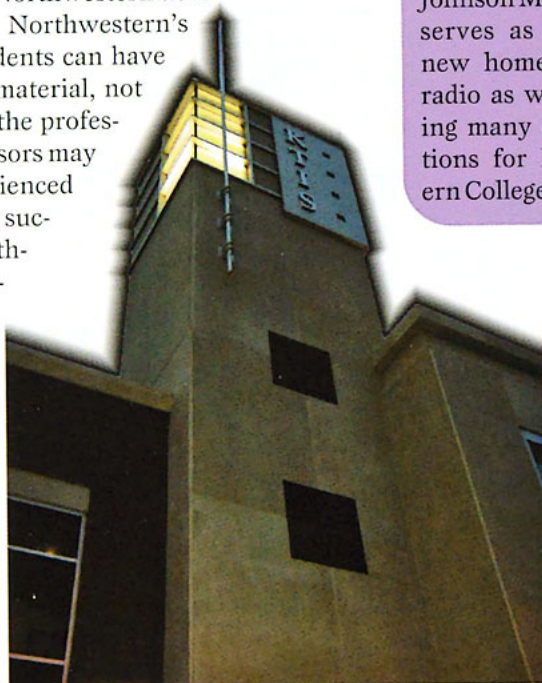

Academics

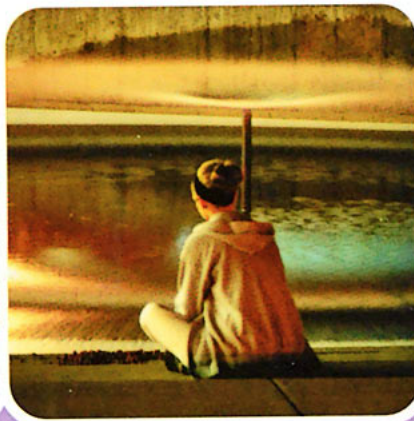

Necessary Evil. Andrea Murnion keeps up with her assigned reading.

The "real" reason students go to a college is to get a degree from an accredited college with the intent of getting a good job in the future. Some ladies may come for the elusive MRS degree while other students may choose a college because of sports or because their parents did, but the academics of a college is always an important factor. While Northwestern College doesn't have the recognition that an Ivy League school does, Northwestern does have advantages that those schools don't. Northwestern's 16:1 student/teacher ratio ensures that students can have the personal attention needed to learn the material, not just get a degree. The classes are taught by the professors, not a teacher's aid, and while the professors may not be Nobel Prize winners, they are experienced in their field of study and often have been successful in that field before teaching at Northwestern. This understanding leads to beneficial real-life examples in the classroom. Most importantly, the professors teach the subjects from a biblical perspective which is an invaluable asset to a student's life. The academics aren't watered down to include the Bible, but instead are enhanced by the biblical and moral principles presented in the classes. While continuing to prepare its students for professional and academic success, Northwestern is set apart by its conscious efforts to equip its students to integrate their faith to all areas of life, and to make a positive impact on the world as a Christian above any other worldly successes.

New building on the block. The Mel Johnson Media Center serves as the brand new home for KTIS radio as well as serving many other functions for Northwestern College and Radio.

A million miles away. Emily Ashley Dreher looks like she's paying attention, but what is she really thinking?

Fountain of knowledge. Emily Kremer hopes to soak up some knowledge as she studies by the fountain in front of Maranatha Hall.

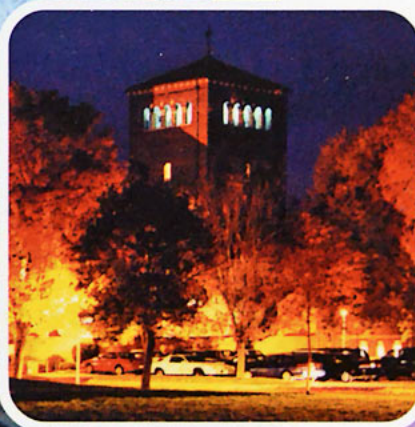

"...but I can tell you this." Dean Paulson may not know who you're supposed to marry, but he does know about teaching from Matthew.

Funny book? Or does Rachel Lagestee just know that a camera is pointed in her direction.

AT THE CROSS

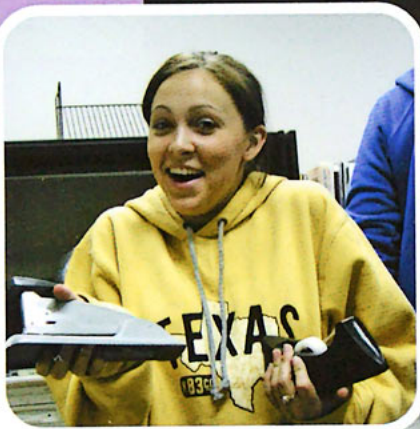

Night-light. Nazareth Hall glows in the darkness.

TV star - well, sort of. Paul Keller shoots television footage of the football game for his media class.

Time to worship. David Olson plays his guitar as he leads worship at the Edge.

Fully loaded. Amber Dauner shows that the new yearbook office is stocked with both staples and tape.

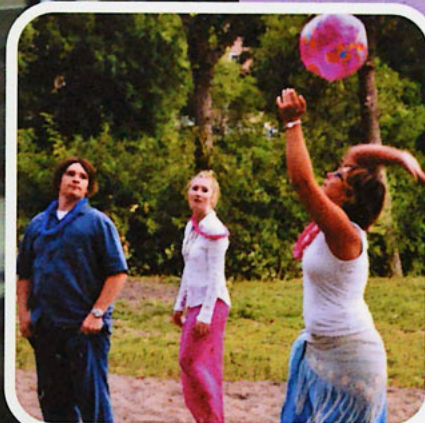

AT THE CROSS

What does this button do? Andy Youso seems to know as he runs the controls during a WVOE radio broadcast.

Island Hula Party in Minnesota? Fundraiser Fun. SMF leaders Scott Koehler, Olga Dorofeev, and Andrea Murnion enjoy playing beach ball volleyball at NWSA's Island Hula Party. Chris Masimer and Khanh Nguyen enjoy themselves during a SMF coffeeshouse

The face behind the voice. Justin Goldberg is at home in the WVOE radio studio in the new Mel Johnson Media Center.

Would you like some coffee with your cream? Ella Reynolds may just add some coffee to the creamer container at the SMF sponsored coffeeshouse.

Is there any correlation between Chicago and Republicans? Rock climbing and knitting? A radio station and North Dakota? In most places, probably not, but at Northwestern College they are all linked as some of the various clubs and organizations that students are involved in. Whether it's a burden for those in the community, a common love for the outdoors, a passion for world missions, or a desire to serve and lead the student body, the clubs and organizations at Northwestern give students an opportunity to give their time and efforts to make an impact on the immediate community of Roseville, the Twin Cities, and even the world. The clubs and organizations provide an outlet for students to minister to those around them while using the skills and talents that they've been refining while at Northwestern.

Flagman. Evan Kemp proudly displays the state flag on behalf of the North Dakota club in the Homecoming Parade.

Doin' what comes naturally.
Kristen Cruze steals the show starring as Annie Oakley in the fall musical 'Annie Get Your Gun.'

AT THE CROSS

Anticipation. Dolly, played by Sarah Selby, describes Buffalo Bill's show in the fall musical.

Tootin' his own horn. Sam Anderson gets warmed up before his performance.

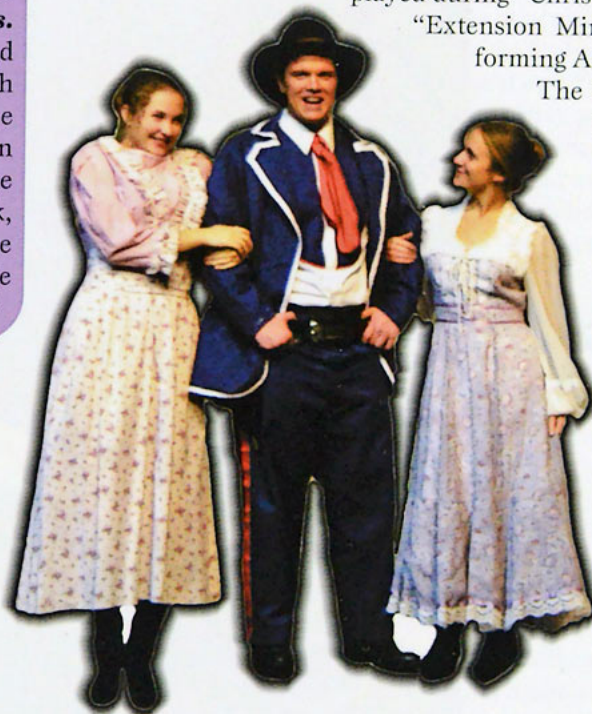

Performing Arts

Is he just acting? Luke Erickson, as Charlie, is obviously annoyed by Dolly's constant chatter in 'Annie Get Your Gun.'

There's no business like show business.

Joy Pearson and Shelly Uttech can't resist the charm of Nathan Bird, whose character, Frank, always gets the girls in 'Annie Get Your Gun.'

From the classy and sophisticated performances presented at the "Showcase of Talent," to the comical and fun-loving musical, "Annie Get Your Gun," to the memorable festive excellence displayed during "Christmas at Northwestern," to the traveling "Extension Ministries" teams – Northwestern's Performing Arts department has much to be proud of.

The Performing Arts department seems to improve upon each year's successes and to perform at an even higher level the following year. This success has led to a reputation for excellence that is recognized throughout the Twin Cities. Kristen Cruze, who starred as Annie Oakley in "Annie Get Your Gun," credits Northwestern's success to the outstanding faculty that lead the arts programs, as well as Northwestern's great facilities. She is also optimistic about the future. "We have a great team in place," said Cruze, "and if the Lord keeps providing people who have a passion for this, the program will keep growing and continuing to improve." If past successes are any indication of the future, the future for Northwestern's Performing Arts department is very bright indeed.

Take Note. Emily Miller hits a high note during a practice for the college choir's sopranos.

All aboard. Conductor Timothy Sawyer leads the orchestra and choirs during Christmas at Northwestern.

The best offense... is good defense and Sara Tonneson shows she can play stellar "D."

Dome Day Rout. Brad Fox and Rob Fehr celebrate a Northwestern touchdown in a win at the Metrodome.

AT THE CROSS

Two for one. Kristina Tokle and Jenna Lanzen combine to produce one massive block on an opponent's spike attempt.

Putt it in. Andy Ross crouches as he lines up a putt during a golf tournament.

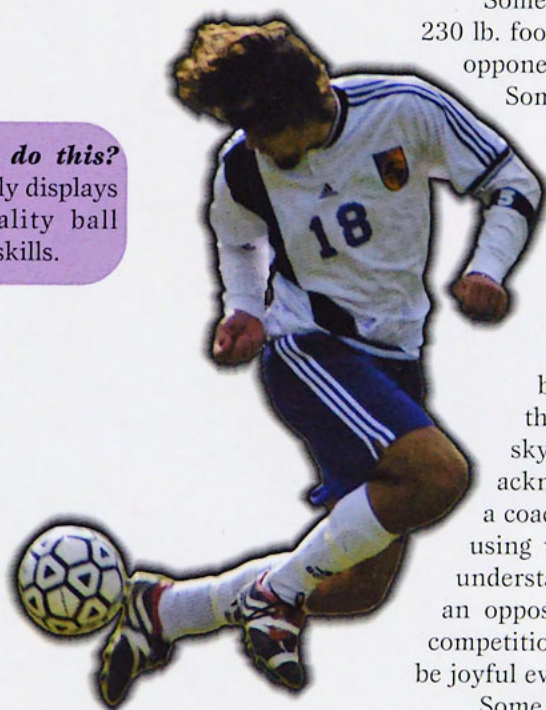

A passing trend. Smooth passes, like this one from Jeff VerSteeg, help generate easy buckets for his teammates.

'Fresh' start. Mandy Jensen is greeted by her teammates as she's introduced before a game.

Can you do this? Lance Kelly displays some quality ball handling skills.

Some may say that something is wrong when a 6'4" 230 lb. football player reaches out his hand to help an opponent up after administering a bone crushing hit.

Some may say that it defies logic that a fast and agile soccer player would score a goal, then bend to their knee to offer thanks instead of parading around the field to attract their own praise. Some may wonder why a pitcher that throws with blazing speed and strikes out a batter, or a basketball player that sidesteps one defender and then rises above another to swish a three-pointer, or a volleyball player that soars above the net to pummel the ball onto the opponent's side - point to the sky with a smile instead of performing a self-acknowledging gesture. Some may question how a coach can effectively motivate a player without using vulgar language or actions. Some may not understand why a team would meet after a game with an opposing team to pray together after a heated competition. Some may not understand why a team can be joyful even after a loss.

Some may see these things as a weakness....we see them as our strength.

In the 'Zone.' Troy Naki celebrates a Northwestern touchdown.

Portraits

Do I have something in my teeth? Liz Peterson's smile reveals her fake "hillbilly" teeth.

The Portraits section seems to be the most overlooked section in every yearbook, but should it be? Of course it doesn't have the crazy or memorable pictures like other sections and a simple mug photo may not be very nostalgic, but it is more than just a future reference for those names and faces that were forgotten long ago or a source of entertainment and comedy for future generations. Nothing has been drastically altered in the Portraits section of this book. It is still comprised of the typical "portraits" things: smiling (or not), serious (or not), goofy (or not), and pictured (or not), with occasional "scatter stories" sprinkled throughout, and yet, it's a section that deserves notice. Northwestern College isn't just Naz, the residence halls, or the Erickson Center. It isn't even just those involved in athletics, clubs, or performing arts. Northwestern College is the hundreds of students, faculty and staff who bring the buildings, teams, and clubs to life every day. These hundreds of pictures of students and staff illustrate God's handiwork in creating each person in a unique way, yet in His image. These pictures are a reminder that God loves every individual and that He has designated a purpose and a plan for their lives. So don't just skip right over the portraits section. What's pictured there is the reason that God sent his Son to die at the cross.

Happy to be alive. Stephanie Meidl and Bridget Bergeson need no reason to grin for the camera.

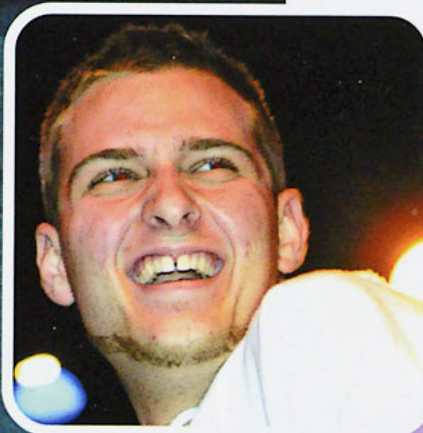

What's not pictured? An intriguing question as Will Stacken and Steve Thompson smile mischievously.

Mixed Emotions.

Elliot Johnson and Erika Albertson ham it up for the camera in Maranatha Hall.

AT THE CROSS

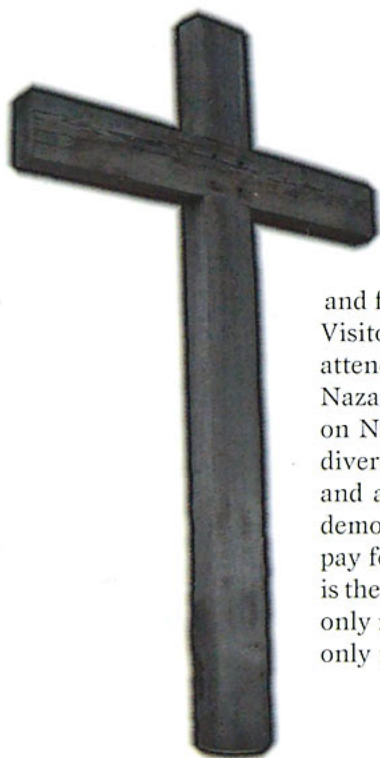

It's contagious. Happiness is... Claire Davis, Justin Novitski's Julie Ross, Katie Austin, and big smile borders Heather Thompson are all smiles on laughter. after getting Coldstone ice cream.

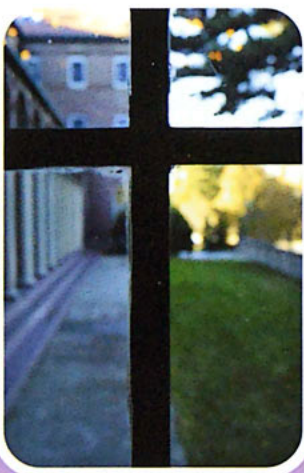

At the Cross

When you were dead in your transgressions and the uncircumcision of your flesh, He made you alive together with Him, having forgiven us all our transgressions, having canceled out the certificate of debt consisting of decrees against us, which was hostile to us; and He has taken it out of the way, having nailed it to the cross.

Colossians 2:13, 14

There is a very special place at Northwestern. There are no restrictions imposed upon who is allowed to go there, and there are no limits on the frequency with which one is allowed to visit. Some stay for hours, while others pause only for a few moments. It's a place that most students and faculty have been and all those who haven't, are strongly encouraged to go. Visitors are gladly shown the way, and for many, it's the defining reason they attend Northwestern. This place has more of an impact on Northwestern than Nazareth or Riley Hall, and it's been around for much longer than any structure on Northwestern's campus. It's a place of unity among everyone, regardless of diverse backgrounds and personalities. It's a place to find help in times of struggle and a place to rejoice in times of happiness. It is the place where the greatest demonstration of love was ever made. It's the place where the Son of God died to pay for the sins of the world. The place is the cross. What was done at the cross is the foundation for Northwestern College and the lives of many who attend. The only reason to strive for excellence in academics, athletics, clubs, or the arts - the only reason to live - is to glorify Christ, for what He did for us, at the cross.

mission trips

From their mouths...

"Our Poland trip went well. The fact that it wasn't our vision helped. It's about being open and ready to hear God speak and be ready to go. We were willing and flexible. The people's hearts were very open."

-Todd Randall

"It's incredible to see what God is doing in another country! The love of God transcends into every culture. God uses us wherever and when we are ready."

-Sarah Selby

< Family affair
Community members come together to experience the missions team's help and love. Many friendships are made with people in the areas visited. Tight bonds keep students going back for more.

THE FACTS

1 / 7

One out of seven Northwestern students take use their time, energy and skills in a short-term missions trip. The lessons they learn and situations they encounter are a part of "The Northwestern Experience."

10%

SMF financially assists all students who go on missions trips. They contribute up to 10% of the total cost of the trip.

1 / Million

A short-term missions trip is the chance of a life time. There are plenty of opportunities to be a servant of God.

NWC on missions...

Northwestern college has had a "missions heart-beat" from the beginning. As a Christian school, the school encourages and teaches what the Bible says on fulfilling the Great Commission. Groups are sent out each summer, fall, and spring to tell the world the Good News. SMF brings a vision of missions to the school's eyes. By supporting, raising money, and organizing trips for missions trips, SMF plays a vital role in many students' missions experience.

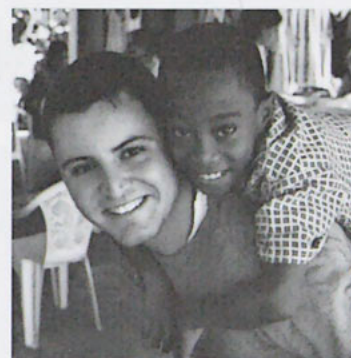

"HOW BEAUTIFUL ARE THE FEET OF THOSE WHO BRING GOOD NEWS."

ROMANS 10:14-15

> Loud love

Tony Oldenburg made many special friendships with children in Trinidad. He found it very rewarding to be a role model to the kids there.

Missions trips give you a chance to:

- glorify God by serving in practical ways
- take part in fulfilling the "Great Commission"
- be a blessing to long-term missionaries and churches on the field
- establish relationships with diverse people all over the globe
- stretch your faith and horizons
- build incredible bonds with team members

New Student Orientation

Play hard

The freshmen compete in various group games to get to know each other.

They are simply unreal

Unreal Teal girls bond during another day of freshman orientation. Orientation groups kick off the first of many college friendships.

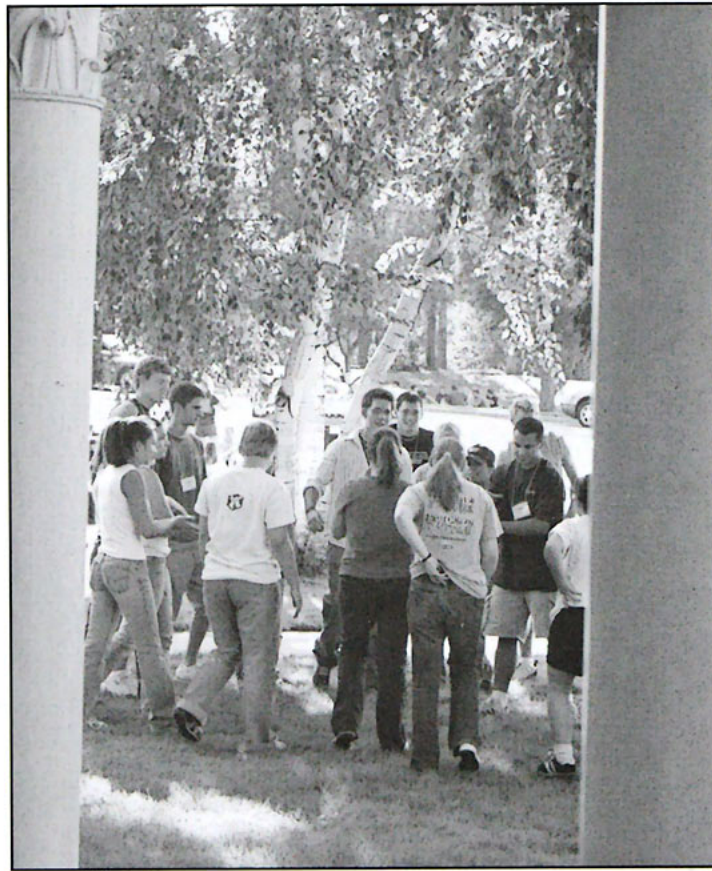

Two by two

Each orientation group makes their way through the parade to the next activity.

Let the games begin

Big games on Maranatha lawn were ice-breakers that got everyone's blood running while helping their group win.

Dan Matthews and Will Stacken frantically rush off from the student center desk to catch another villain resident who set off a door alarm.

On resident life...

- “I really like the dorms! I like the community and the space.”

-Angela Goede

- “Living on-campus is great. It’s just not fun being a freshman and not being able to get off of it.”

-Rachel Weisser

Andy Youso loves living in Snelling Terrace where he can enjoy the beauty of Krispy Kreme doughnuts in the comfort of his own apartment.

Becky Hampton and Sam Ternberg relax and enjoy watching some television together. Socializing is the most popular activity in on-campus housing.

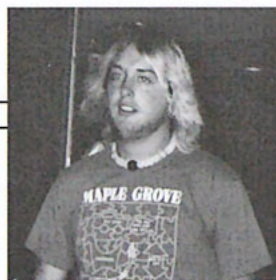

Michael Larson spends his free time with headphones on his ears. He enjoys rocking out to his favorite bands to relieve the stress of school.

Steam pressed

Emmanuel Taylor works on his domestic abilities by ironing his wrinkly piece of clothing.

Role model

R.A. Harley Tessmann stands tall as a role model for the guys in his hall to look up to.

New faces

Freshman Eli Snyder is one of the numerous students that make up the new faces all around campus.

Christmas in the Dorms

Christmas time is here...

Resident Halls in Hartill and Knutson were all decked out for the season. The open house brought many visitors to the dorms to experience the holiday in many different fashions. Each hall chose its own theme to participate in the decorating contest. Whether it was "Christmas in New York" or "Under the Tree," each hall said "Merry Christmas!" in their own way.

< Shining bright

A popular decoration, lights, adorned the many halls to add more Christmas feel. Many hours were spent decorating to get just the right look.

> Cookie monster

Sam Ternberg takes advantage of the many halls that included snacks for passer-bys. Adding to the effect of Christmas aroma were cookies, bars, various snacks and beverages.

< Caribbean Get Away

Each hall took visitors to a new place to spend the holiday. This hall took us away from the Minnesota snow to bask in the warm sun.

Freshman Krysta Gardner and Destiny Mask hang out and socialize in the student center until the late hours of the night.

Many friendships are started and built in this neutral ground in the dorms.

Media alert

One benefit of the student center is the ability to chill with friends and watch television. Here, Andrew Voelker and Stephanie Olson catch up on their T.V. watching while enjoying some ice cream from the Eagle's Nest.

ACADEMICS

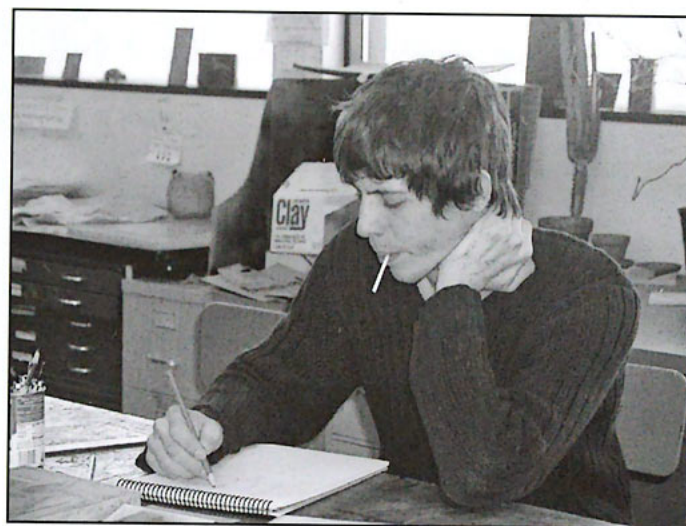

Art & Graphic Design

The department of art and graphic design aims to teach the production of visual arts within a Christian context, toward the goal of preparing students for professional careers in this field. Strong emphasis is placed upon critical thinking, research, and study in the visual arts, both on and off campus.

The graphic design program provides basic and advanced instruction in techniques, technology, and critical-thinking strategies necessary for the field. The art program's objectives are to provide students with basic art knowledge and skills using a variety of media and employing concepts drawn from aesthetics, art history, and art criticism.

This is a good sucker! While sketching something for Jason Moeller has a little snack to spark his creativity.

This is fun!

Sticking his hands in the molding clay, David Schussman is preparing to mold a sculpture.

What should I add? Looking at the details, Nicole Moore wonders what to add to her design.

Why aren't you working?! Doug Swenson found that shaking the computer helps it start working again.

Anthony Schaefer

What is your major?
"Graphic Design."

Why did you choose this major?
"I chose graphic design because I love to put words on everything."

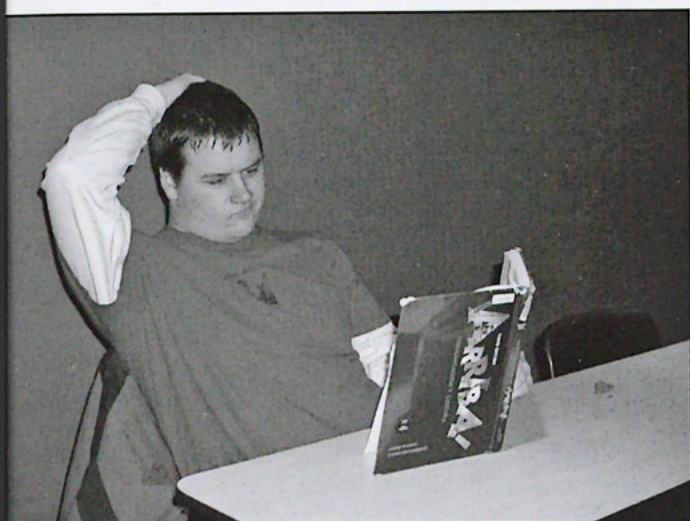

What is your dream job?
"To be a race car driver."

One more line!
Almost finished with his drawing, Jeremy Nutzman concentrates hard on getting it perfect.

English & Languages

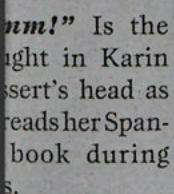

It does that mean! With a puzzled look on his face, Greg questions what his Spanish book is saying.

Reading critically! Reading intently in their books Kaitlyn and Helienna Anderson don't even notice the camera.

Understanding Style! After class Jennifer Lundberg and Kelina Pearson ponder what was discussed in class.

mm! Is the light in Karin's head as she reads her Spanish book during class.

Emily Welt

What is your major?

"Communication Arts/Literature Education."

Why did you choose this?

"I love kids and English so it's a perfect combination!"

What is your dream job?

"To teach at an inner city school overseas, maybe Guatemala or wherever God leads me."

Arriba!

Before class starts, Steve Thompson and Micah Schott help each other with a question.

More reading! During her English class, Jeanna Litynski reads about what the professor is discussing.

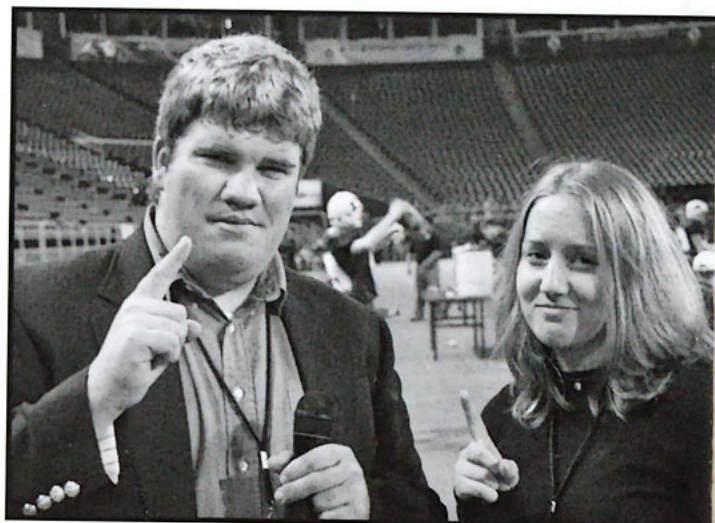

Communications

Excellent communication skills are important in both social and career settings. Communication is the basis for relational developing and maintenance, family cohesion, and work success. The communication department allows students to choose from five different majors including communication studies, theatre, computer-mediated communication, public relations, and journalism.

The department's mission statement is as follows: The communication department at Northwestern College exists to prepare students for leadership in ministries or careers in communication-related fields. Through a careful balance of theoretical knowledge, hands-on skill, and the development of a Christ-centered worldview, our students learn to be critical thinkers and effective communicators.

Back to you. While reporting at the dome game field reporter Paul Keller and field camera Shenna Miller let everyone know Northwestern is #1.

Hard at work!

Students are able to have hands-on experience in the broadcasting department with the new facility and equipment.

What's going on? Contemplating what the professor is discussing, Patrick Loeb and Kristin Cruze stare forward in utter confusion.

What's she doing? A group of communication majors play game of gestures at the communication honors meeting.

Stasia Krivanek

What is your major?

"General communication studies."

What do you plan on doing with your degree?

"I would like to be a speaker at youth events and retreats, stuff like that."

What is your dream job?

"My dream job is to be a part of Women of Faith!"

On air! Along with the other hosts of the Man Wrap, Sam Turnberg wears his man skirt while on the air.

Ahhhhh! Students attended the outdoor dedication ceremony in the parking lot of the MJMC which was held during chapel. Jennifer Nelson and Colleen Hendrick are showing how most guests felt in the cold, rainy weather.

Mel Johnson Media Center

A new addition! The Mel Johnson Media Center is located across Lydia Road on the Northwestern campus. It's the new home for KTIS along with classrooms and offices.

The Mel Johnson Media Center was dedicated in fall on September 12, 2003. The ceremony was attended by students along with members of the community and Mel Johnson's family.

The speaker was Leith Anderson, who gave an inspirational message that compared the new building to a magnificent mountain.

The special music was provided by the Northwestern choir along with Sara Groves performing her song, "Generations."

The ceremony concluded with a closing prayer and Mel Johnson's wife, Janet Anderson cutting the ribbon.

New and Improved! The new building has broadcasting rooms available for Northwestern students in the lower level.

Action! The ceremony was filmed and broadcasted by the Northwestern broadcasting department.

We're praying! KTIS listeners sent in ribbons to be attached to a larger ribbon which was wrapped around the building.

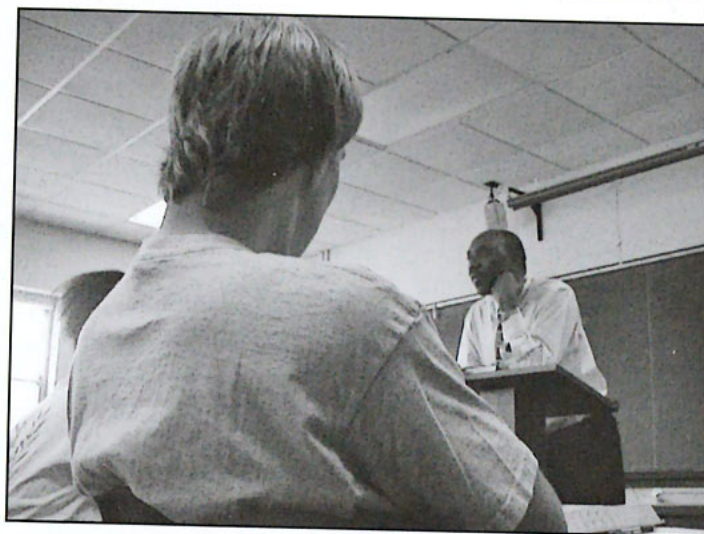

Business

Northwestern College seriously considers the Lord's charge to equip the saints. To that end, the Department of Business is dedicated to providing the necessary tools to function within a business climate while devoting one's life to serving the Lord. In a unique position, Northwestern offers courses in all facets of business, defining a Christian perspective. Moral and ethical considerations are integrated within all courses, Scripture demands that we serve as good stewards of the resources and talents with which the Lord entrusts us. A fully integrated business curriculum provides a graduate with the abilities and skills to apply within a secular or church-related field.

Hmm I wonder what's for lunch? Seeing class from Wolcyn's perspective sheds light on the subject at hand.

Ahhh let me out!

What is this guy talking about? Looking puzzled, Joe VanderArk stares off into oblivion.

Oh not another test! While working his way through the test, Caleb Hudson doesn't get distracted by the camera.

Elicia Olsen

What is your major?
"Finance."

Why did you choose this as your major?

"I like working with numbers and people, and I wanted something that would combine the two of those."

What do you plan to do with your degree?
"fix this."

I love school! David Casper shows his enthusiasm for class.

What is it? With only one problem left, Lindsay Davis concentrates intently on her assignment.

Psychology

The joys of group pictures! On this nice sunny day future psychologists spend some time outside.

What are you doing? This psychology class stares at the camera while wondering why they're being interrupted.

Hey, what's up! Chillin' in class Nate Hesson and Eric Nelson ignore what they professor has to say.

"This is great!" is the thought in Katie Gorges head during psychology.

Samantha Mount

What is your major?

"My major is general Psychology."

What are you doing with your major?

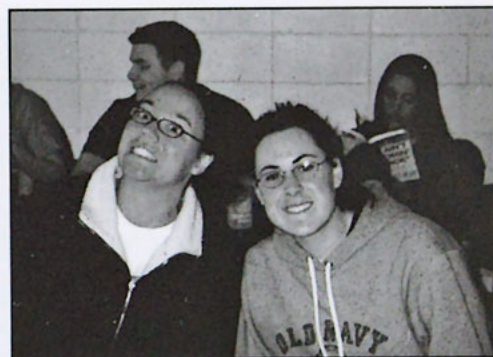

"I am going to school now and want to work with missions at a Christian college while getting my masters."

What is your dream job?

"I want to be a Trauma Psychologist that works with children."

Cheeeese!

Rebekah Robie and Angie Wilmeth show their love for psychology by giving a big grin.

Hmm...

Sophomore Justin Payette ponders the questions of life while in the student center.

Bible/Christian Ministries

The purpose of the Bible Department is to promote the central place of the Scriptures as the theological frame of reference for the curriculum.

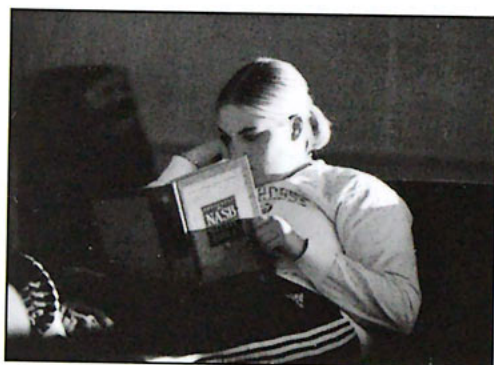

The department seeks to teach students the Bible as "the whole counsel of God," focused on the Lord Jesus Christ, and to train them to interpret and apply biblical content. It seeks to help students develop a life submitted to Christ and ordered by biblical ethics so that they can be steadfast spiritually in the midst of life's incongruities and trials. The department attempts to equip students to develop a biblical worldview, to expose students to ministry in the church and to the world, and to enhance a climate of respect for one another in the learning environment.

What are they all thinking? Capturing different emotions students during class this shows Mitch Hinton, Lisa Turgeon, Adrienne Frank, Chad Hudson, and Angelo Licari during the Bible class.

This is never going to end!

Sitting in the student center, Amy Peterson is busy reading through the Old Testament.

This is interesting!

Pen in hand, Brandon Westphall is hard at work reading what the professor is discussing.

I have a question. During class Trisha Cleveland asks Dean Paulson question about the assignment.

Perrin Werner

What is your major?

"Biblical studies."

What do you plan on doing with your degree?

"Initially I felt God calling me into pastoral studies but since I've started I've felt a calling more toward academia."

What is your dream job?

"Probably a combination of teaching, speaking, and writing."

Just sitting there! Relaxing by the window Sally Underwood does her Old Testament homework

Music

raise him with trumpet sound! The Northwestern band had a performance where they were able to share with the community God's love through music.

Sing praises to the Lord! After working hard at practice the college choir performed their beautiful songs for the community.

Practice makes perfect! Using one of the practice rooms Amy Buer rehearses one of her pieces.

The Music Department seeks to provide a music program of excellence and scope that, integrated with biblical studies and interpreted in the light of Christian philosophy, will produce an individual who, as a knowledgeable musician, can perform with musical responsiveness and understanding, has developed aesthetic potential to its highest possible level, and is able to assume the role of proficient music educator for Christian service in church, private education, or public education.

The department offers many different options for what area of music a student can major in. These involve areas such as Music in the Church, Music History, Music Literature, Music Theory, Music Education, and Music Performance. There are also many different opportunities to get involved with the music department including three choirs, a band, a bell choir, and an orchestra.

Ding Dong!

The bell choir amazed the audience with their wonderfully blended performance.

Hard at work!

Kelsey Seamon, Leah Thomas, and Amy Buer get in one last practice before a performance.

Becky Koppelman

What is your major?

"Music education with a vocal emphasis."

Why did you choose this?

"I knew I wanted to teach and music has a lot of significance, it just really stuck out!"

What is your dream job?

"My dream job would be to live in a small town possible in the Dakotas and teach K-12 so I can build relationships and watch the kids grow up!"

Math & Science

Math and Science at Northwestern

The role of science and mathematics at Northwestern College is an important, that of aiding students to enhance reasoning skills and to understand how they relate to the creation. These courses stress the unity and interrelationships of knowledge, the crucial significance of ideas, and understanding of life as lived in harmony with the natural world.

The sciences afford an understanding and appreciation for the physical world, the relationship between energy and matter, and the natural processes which are continuously at work. Mathematics provides a foundational framework for both science and general education studies.

One left! Hard at work on his math, Leif Borg turns the page to finish up the last problem.

You're not done yet? Already done with his work Ryan Petersen watches as Timothy Kersting is still busy doing his.

Is class over yet? Bored out of his mind, Alex Johnson plays with his pen until the end of the period.

Amy Sturycz

What is your major?
"Biology."

Why did you choose this as your major?

"When I was in third grade my sister died from a heart disease and that inspired me to go into the biology field."

What do you plan on doing with your degree?

"Work with teens and young women educating them about the effects of birth control, abortions and things like that."

I don't get it!
Confused by her professor Sarah Haugrud stares at him in wonder.

I love science!
Working on lab issues project Bridget Berges finds a love for science.

History

For 1492... Dr. Aling shares some of his knowledge while the class scribbles furiously to keep up.

Two view points... "This class is pretty interesting" is the thought on Brady Pluim's mind, while Brad Fox is counting down the minutes until class is over.

Something smells! Eugene Kunkle stops working to see where the stench is coming from.

I can't wait til this homework is history! Is the thought on David Keller's mind.

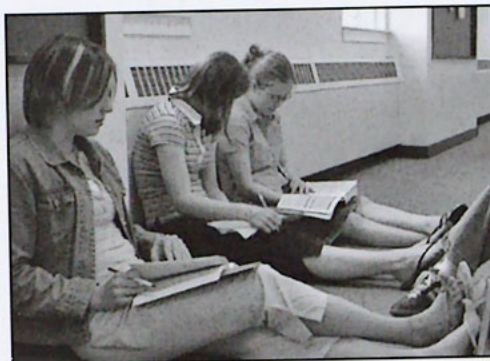

The department of History and related fields offers courses in four areas - History, Economics, Geography, and Political Science - and a major in History and minors in History and Political Science.

History courses at Northwestern College cover all periods, including the ancient world, and treat the political and socio-culture history of the nations under consideration. Research methods and problem-solving techniques of the historian are emphasized. Political science students have the option of several internship opportunities, making study in this discipline practical and vibrant. Also, the student's educational experience can be enhanced through participation in cooperative programs with the William Mitchell College of Law and the Council for Christian Colleges and Universities.

Moving on to the 1600's...

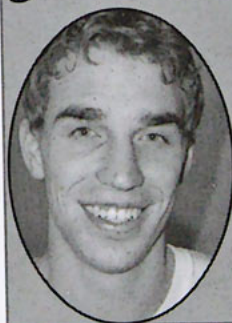

Dr. Aling continues as students Trevor Thatcher and Eben Stine as their pencils turn to stubs.

Just keep reading, just keep reading!

Destiny Mask and two classmates continue their work in the hall.

Jon Papik

What is your major?

"My major is in History and my minor is Political Science."

What are you doing with your major?

"I am the Communications Director with the state's auditor office and I would like to now go to law school."

What is your dream job?

"I want to be on the Supreme Court."

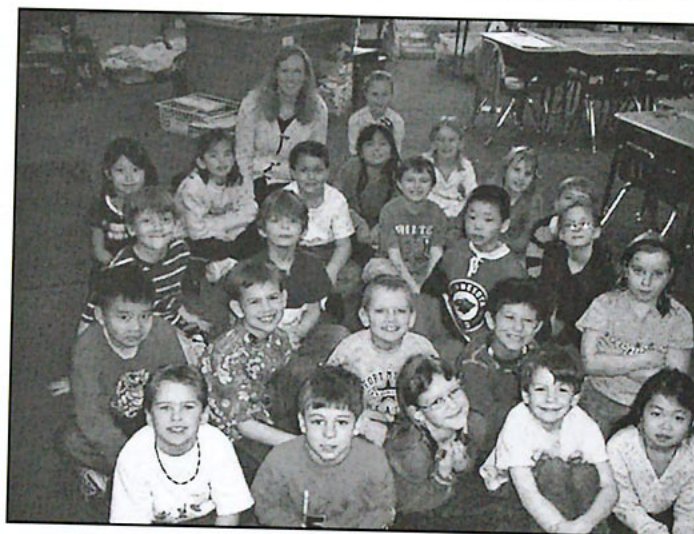

Education

The education department seeks to develop professional educators for service within public or private schools. Students are involved in a wide variety of field experiences and receive extensive interaction with current educators in the field. The teacher education program is designed to prepare the graduate to be a reflective individual, a lifetime learner, an effective practitioner, and an active participant within the classroom community, the professional community, and the extended community.

There are a variety of choices for students when it comes to choosing an area of emphasis. These include: Early Childhood, Elementary, Communication Arts/Literature, Mathematics, Social Studies, English as a Second Language, Musical, Physical, Visual Arts, Education Studies, and Kinesiology.

Picture time! While at her placement, Kelli O'Dell gets her class together for a picture.

ESL major, Emily Simon teaches her students the basics of math.

Can't teach an old dog new tricks.... The kids can't seem to get "Teacher" Ryan Lang to master the hula hoop.

Ryan Lang

What is your major?

"Elementary Education."

Why did you choose this?

"Well, because I want to be a teacher and because of all the benefits of working with kids, the influence you have and them looking up to you."

Where would you like to teach and what age group?

"In the Twin Cities or a suburb and I'm looking at 1st, 2nd, or 3rd grade."

Working hard!

Brian Ibs is gaining some real life experience to use in the classroom someday.

Extension Ministries Mission Statement

Extension Ministries is committed to glorifying God and encouraging others. Student performance teams use instrumental and vocal music, improvisational comedy, spiritual testimony and worship to be a dynamic extension of the ministry of Jesus Christ and the mission of Northwestern college to churches, youth groups and other organizations.

Where's Improv?

Improv was not able to be a part of the Extension Ministries this year because there was no student leadership available. They hope to have it back next year, but for now there is still the improv club. The fun games and laughter will again be sent out to local churches and organizations.

I think Extension Ministries is one of the most effective tools we have in exemplifying the mission of Northwestern College right now because they hear directly from the students, not Public Relations.

Director of Extension
Ministries

Annie Get Your Gun

The production of "Annie Get Your Gun" was fabulous. The witty lines and spirited gestures and facial expressions of the actors achieved a laugh from every audience member. "There's No Business Like Show Business!" and "Anything You Can Do" are known favorites, but the other selections are just as fun and clever.

Sarah Selby emphasized how much work goes into the show that the audience does not see. Weeks of practice go into the musical. In the last week they felt like they needed more time. On the first Thursday not everything went right. Sometimes the gun shot did not go off. They pulled it together for Friday, though. The first weekend was vocally rough because of sickness. However, even though every night had problems, they became better at covering them up to "go on with the show." All agreed that each night the performance was better.

Everyone enjoyed playing their roles and being a different person than they actually were. It was challenging for Selby who played a role opposite of her personality.

It was difficult putting all the elements of the performance together. All the technicalities must be worked in with the lines and music. Starla Larson also commented that the dances could be distressing because the space was different for each performance; hay bales were in different spots. They had to be flexible.

Selby also noted the camaraderie that the cast shared. One of the best aspects for most of the cast was getting to know the others. Outside of rehearsals they would get together.

All the hard work paid off. The show had a marvelous run with every night having a nearly full house. Not one person went away displeased with the performance.

Once more! The entire cast in a reprisal of "There's No Business Like Show Business!" closes the musical.

"I won!" Frank, Nathan Bird, jeers at Annie, Kristen Cruze, when she loses the shooting match.

Annie stumbles along the path into Cincinnati with all types of game hung around her neck.

Giddy girls The girls of the neighbor, Sally Underwood and Melissa Stegeman, are keen on the great shot, Frank Butler. Frank does not fall in love with every giddy girl that gives him flowers, however.

Resolved Looking determined is Sitting Bull, played by Karl DeRocher Pondering Charlie, Luke Erickson, thinks of the great possibility of merging the two shows.

Proclamation Buffalo Bill, Carl O'Brien, announces the contestants of the shooting match.

Dance The cow girls, Sally Underwood, Erika Albertson, Alissa Foreman, Kristina Knutson, and Starla Larson, open the musical with a jig.

Scorn Dolly, Sarah Selby, mocks Annie for her supposed ability to shoot a rifle.

Sure Shot Mac, Levon Dimmick, brings out rifles for the shooting match. Everyone wants to see who really is better.

"Overall there is a rush when the show begins, but then it dissipates and you keep going," Luke Erickson.

From the Director

Annie Oakley began shooting when she was 9 and after her father died, she supported the family by shooting game. On a visit to Cincinnati she shot a match with Frank E Butler and won it. She joined the popular Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show. More popularly, the public called her "Little Sure Shot."

This musical is fun and celebrates life as it entertains us. Northwestern Theatre Arts and the Department of Music are pleased to join together and present Irving Berlin's songs and "Annie Get Your Gun." - Patsy Miller Joining Forces All three choirs bring their beautiful voices together to fill Marantha with sound for Christmas at NWC.

CHRISTMAS AT NORTHWESTERN

December 5-7, 2003 was the annual Christmas at Northwestern concert. It is always a great time of music that shares the message of Christ's birth. "Infant Holy, Infant Lowly" was this year's theme. Varsity Men's Chorus, Women's Chorale, College Choir, Handbell Choir, Symphonic Band, and Chamber Orchestra all performed. The Festival Choir is also involved, which is comprised of all the choirs plus additional Northwestern students who are not in choir during the semester.

Different groups worked together for different pieces. For example, the Festival Choir sang with the Symphonic Band for "Hosanna in the Highest," Handbell Choir and Women's Chorale coordinated for "Carol of the Wise Men," and Varsity Men's Chorus, the percussion, the piano, and a soloist all assembled for "Hodie!"

The harp, organ, and piano also accompanied groups on several pieces. Melissa Moore was the harpist. Megan Beehler played piano for "Canticle of Mary" and Andrea Kelley was the pianist for "What Child is this?"

There was also a number of vocal soloists for different songs. These included Rachel DeLine, Hope Lombardo, Lizabeth Noteboom, Timothy Otis, and Jennifer Wallis.

The program began with the Festival Choir lining the aisles of Maranatha, singing "Gesù Bambino" by Pietro A. Yon with the Chamber Orchestra, Handbell Choir, and organ accompanying them. The show flowed to the audience members from every direction. The concert proceeded with various groups performing a variety of pieces, hymns that the audience stood and joined in singing, and narration to the audience through the program. It closed with the Festival Choir once again lining the aisles, but this time with candles.

The show was wonderful and enjoyable for all who attended. Northwestern contains great talent.

Sustaining voices

Matthew Jones, Ryan Panasuk, Greg Johnson, and Micah Schott are a few of the male voices that brought lower support to the song "Infant Holy, Infant Lowly."

Double reeds add flavor

Jessica Holt on the oboe and Amanda Busse on the english horn contribute their unique instruments' sounds to "Hosanna in the Highest" by Peter Hamlin. The symphonic band joined with the Festival Choir for this piece.

Bells peal in Maranatha

The handbell choir rings in joyful noise for Christmas at Northwestern, performing "Angels from the Realms of Glory." The music was arranged by Cynthia Dobrinski.

College Choir takes center stage

Everyone, including the crowded stage, look on to the College Choir with their beautiful voices, which put forth wonderfully blended quality.

Soul in the Saxophones

Kelsey Seamon and Leah Thorpe perform in "Be Joyful in the Lord."

Graceful bowing

Olga Dorofeev sits up straight to gently play for "Czech Suite, Op 39, II. Polka" by Antonin Dvorák.

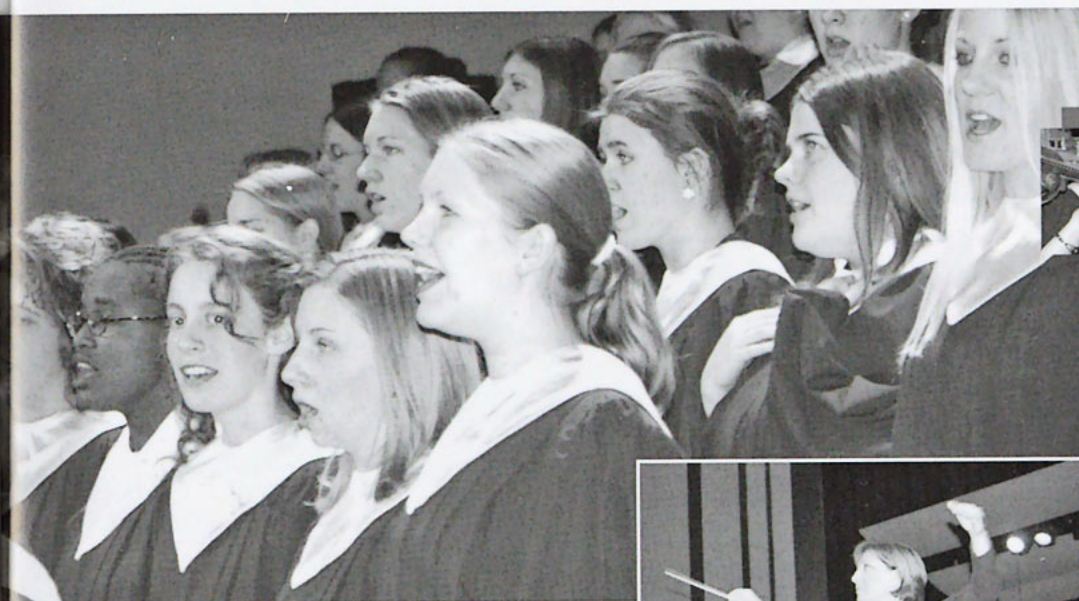

In one accord

The Festival Choir and Melissa Moore on the harp unite their talents for "The Rune of Hospitality."

Reverberating bells

Marie Funseth, Amanda McAllan, and Maria Tiller play for "O Come, All Ye Faithful" with the brass ensemble.

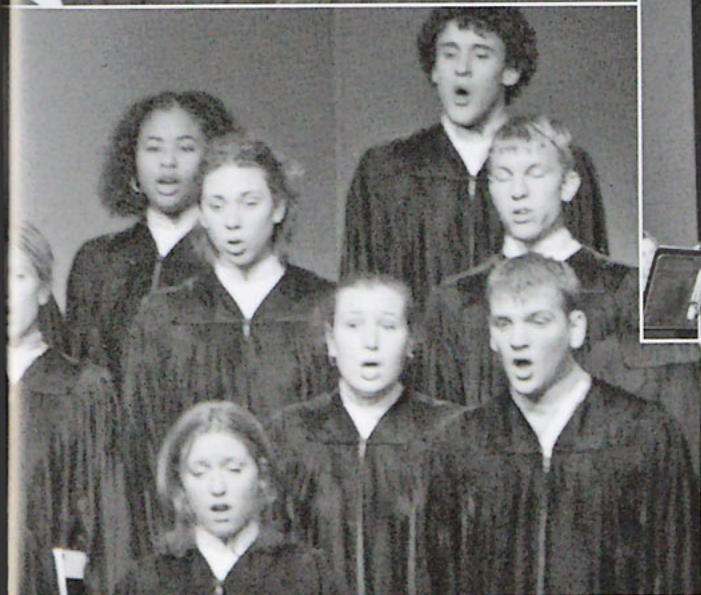

Alluring vocals

Women's Chorale gather their voices for "Canticle of Mary" by Jeffery L. Ames and S. Scott Leaman. The sweet lines told of Mary's praises.

Keeping it together

Mary Kay Geston, conductor of Women's Chorale, directs the audience in "Holy, Holy, Holy! Lord God Almighty" at the beginning of the performance.

Resounding

The College Choir members put their hearts into "Sing We Now of Christmas." "What Child is this?" was also performed by the College Choir as a part of the concert.

Low Strings

"You've driven me out of [my senses]!"

Amanda is on Tom's case about many little things, including novels she thinks she's bad. Amanda sits quietly listening.

Accusations

Tom tells his mother she is an "ugly, babbling, old witch" after she accuses him of going to bars.

Ladies and Gentlemen

Tom introduces the play in his opening monologue.

Just so

Amanda hems Laura's dress, as she makes a fuss, to get her ready for dinner in which Jim would be in attendance.

The Glass Menagerie

A crazy, southern woman, a crippled daughter, an impatient, forceful son, and an amiable gentleman caller come together in Tennessee Williams' play of emotion. Dielschneider, Buckout, Verebly, and Cote did a fantastic job portraying the distinctive characters.

The cast had a great time putting the production together. Verebly's favorite part was at the very end, in the height of emotion. Everything came to a head and then exploded. "Go then, go to the moon you selfish dreamer!" she screamed at Tom. The amazing aspect of theater, Verebly says, is "the passionate ways that you'd never get to do in real life, with no side effects!" She noted the difference between high school and college theater. "In high school you just perform it, in college you are challenged and can apply the principles to the audience and your life." She also learned that theater really is an art form.

Buckout thoroughly enjoyed working with the cast and learning a lot about acting. She had a good time with the fun, energetic tone of "Annie Get Your Gun" in the fall, but really appreciated the thought-provoking, sober-toned drama.

Dielschneider loved the dynamic expression and momentum of the scenes. "It was exciting to see it unfold, unlocking something you've never seen before." The only low point he could think of was when Verebly lost her voice on the last night.

Besides dramas at church, this was Cotes first time in theater. It met if not surpassed his expectations. It was an amazing experience for him, as it was for the rest of the cast.

Morning Coffee

Tom and Amanda talk over coffee before he goes to work.

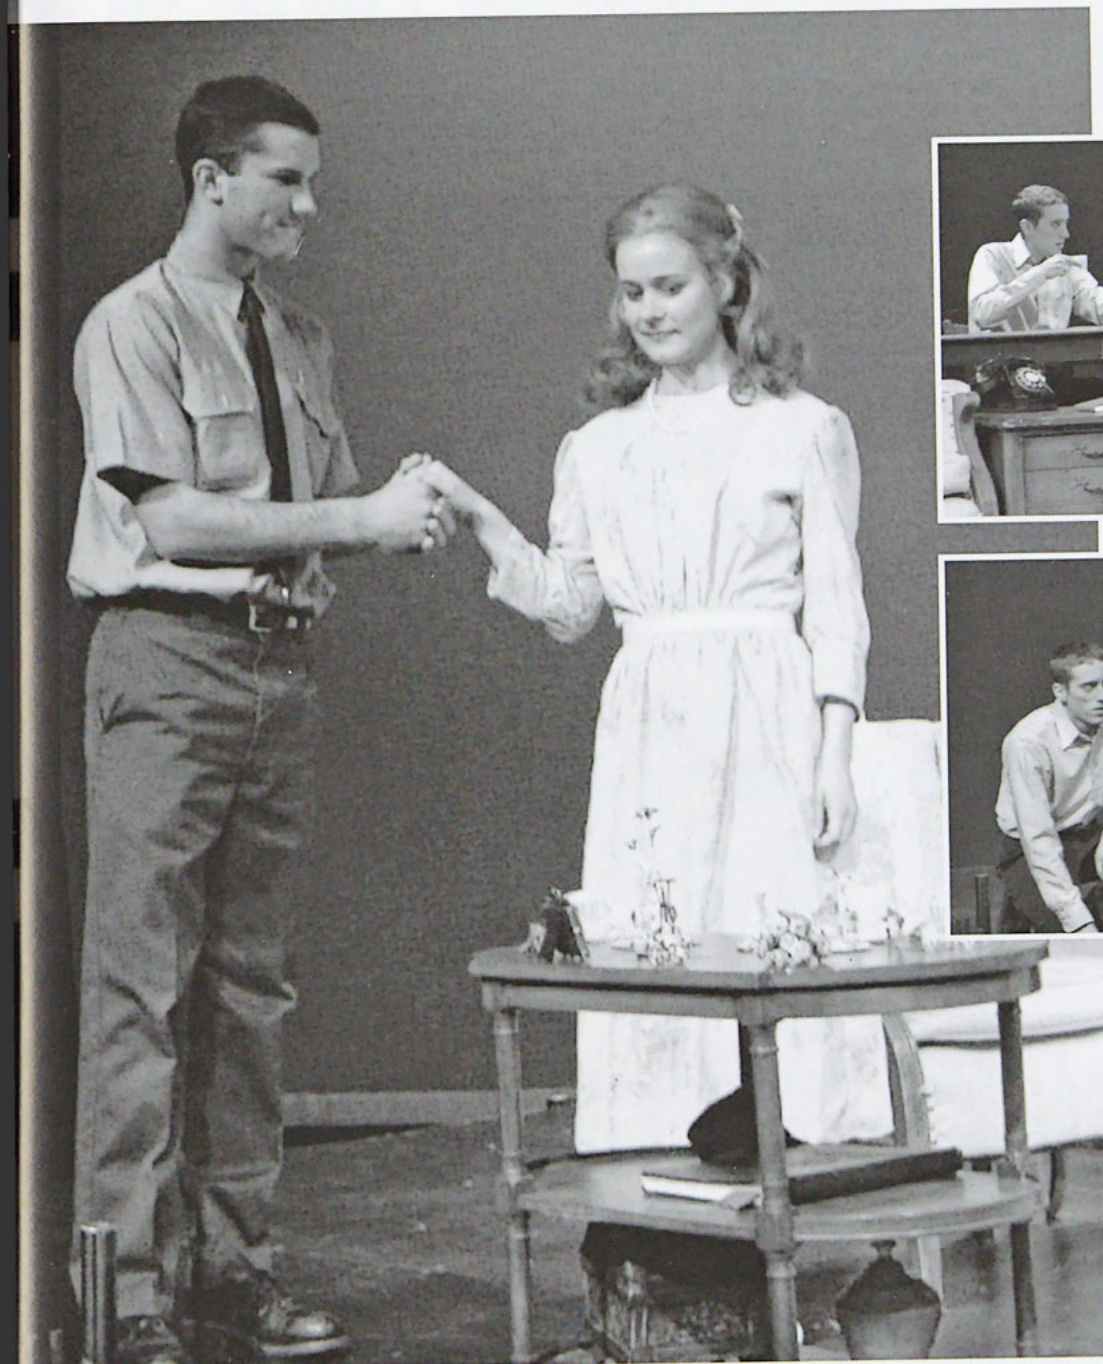

Apologizing

After throwing his coat in a fit of anger, which knocked over some of Laura's figures, Tom apologizes. Laura's glass menagerie is very important to her; she retreats to it when ever she is upset.

Cold hands

Laura is extremely nervous since she has not seen Jim since high school. She explains she had been playing Victrola so she has cold hands.

Introducing New Faculty

Joanna Klein, Ph.D.

Love of research is what got new Northwestern professor Joanna Klein her start in biology. Klein says she has wanted to do research ever since high school. She says she likes that biology "is applicable to the things we encounter in our everyday lives." She advises students interested in the field of science to get research experience while an undergraduate. Klein worked under one of her professors in his lab which added valuable experience to her career. "It helps you to apply the concepts better than just working in the lab," Klein says. Klein hopes to involve undergraduate students in her own research here to help them gain experience.

David Kozamchak, M.M.

"[Music] is a rewarding experience for both the performer and the audience," states David Kozamchak, a new professor in the Music Department. "It inspires people." His job at Northwestern includes conducting the orchestra, teaching violin, and coaching chamber ensembles. Kozamchak taught himself to play the piano at a young age and started playing violin in sixth grade, giving him an early interest in music. It was in high school when he decided to become a conductor. Kozamchak says Northwestern interested him because it was a private Christian school with an orchestra. Kozamchak's advice for music majors is, "Be able to focus, and spend hours practicing. Be ok with spending lots of time by yourself perfecting your craft. Hours of practicing pay off in the long run."

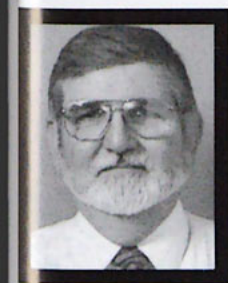

Amy Groetsema, M.A.

Watching my students learn and seeing them come to new levels of understanding," is what NWC professor Amy Groetsema enjoys about teaching. "It always challenges me to keep learning." Groetsema will be teaching English education classes and general education classes. She will also be working with and supervising student teachers. Groetsema primarily works with Communication Art Language Education (CALE) majors. Groetsema says one thing that influenced her while attending college was "teachers who were role models for why I would want to teach. I had Christian teachers who were examples to me of how to integrate faith and what I do." Her advice for students is, "You have to enjoy what you're doing. It's important to know that it's that God's calling for your life."

Rodney Loeffler, M.M.

"Personal relationships are what education is really about," states Rodney Loeffler, the new Music Department chair at Northwestern. What he enjoys most about his profession is "interaction with students and faculty. Loeffler brings a lot of experience to the Music Department having taught in public schools and at the University of the Pacific and the University of Minnesota. "A deep personal desire to finish out my career in a Christian college" is what brought Loeffler to NWC. One thing he enjoys about working with music students at a Christian college is that they are "passionate about their relationship with the Lord and having that purpose makes it meaningful. "I have never worked a day in my life," says Loeffler. "I'm very blessed everyday doing something I love."

Servant Leadership

Student body president, Scott Whitmore, began praying that he would be used by God while he was at Northwestern in whatever way would use his gifts most effectively and make him most useful. God placed Scott in several leadership positions beginning his freshman year, and this has prepared Scott for his role as student body president his junior year. As soon as Scott felt the Lord's peace, he knew this position was where God was leading him this year. "I have two passions in life: a passion to know and serve the Lord and a passion to know, challenge and encourage people." Scott hopes to use these two passions in the future with the business degree that he is currently pursuing. Scott enjoys meeting with students and hearing what God has been and is doing in their lives. This year, Scott has brought several of these students into chapel to share their lives with the whole student body. He feels this is an effective way we can be praying for each other and holding each other up as a community. The student body as a whole has been growing together both spiritually and relationally because Scott has allowed God to work through him in this way. Scott has also been working with KTIS radio, which has allowed him to invite guest speakers into chapel that maybe would not otherwise be able to.

Through Northwestern's Student Association, the student body government has been providing endless possibilities for students to get involved during this year in their college years. Scott described the student body government as a family. They are able to laugh together when life tickles them as well as cry on each others' shoulders when pain and hurt touch them. These times are what create some of Scott's greatest memories of the year. The members of NWSA meet weekly to share their lives with each other as they lead the student body in our unseen areas and to make sure everything is running smoothly as a whole.

Scott has claimed this year's key verse for himself as he strives to do God's will in his position: "God was pleased to have his fullness dwell in him and through him to reconcile to himself all things, whether things on earth or things in heaven, by means of his blood, shed on the cross. May we follow Scott's example of seeking the Lord for opportunities to serve him and then jump in and let him shine through where he puts us as we rely on him to use us in various ways to impact our world."

The Legendary Rock

Where does someone go to show support for their favorite team, to announce a wedding engagement, or write a welcoming message? Ask any Northwestern student and the answer is easy. It's the ROCK. The Rock is as much a part of NWC as the sparkling snow is a part of winter in Minnesota.

The Rock originated when it was unearthed during the building of the dorms. Rather than have the construction men haul it away, the college choose to keep it and had it put it near the entrance road to the dorms and Student Center.

The Rock has been through some trying times. Once, a couple of students thought it would be funny to try make it look like the Rock was stolen, so they dug a hole next to the Rock to push it in. However, the crown of the rock was still visible. This was such a big scare that it was then cemented in the ground to prevent further nasty tricks.

The Rock has also seen many colors and layers of paint. After pondering this thought, a few male students thought it would be fun to set it on fire. Sure enough, they did and the flames flew high one spring night.

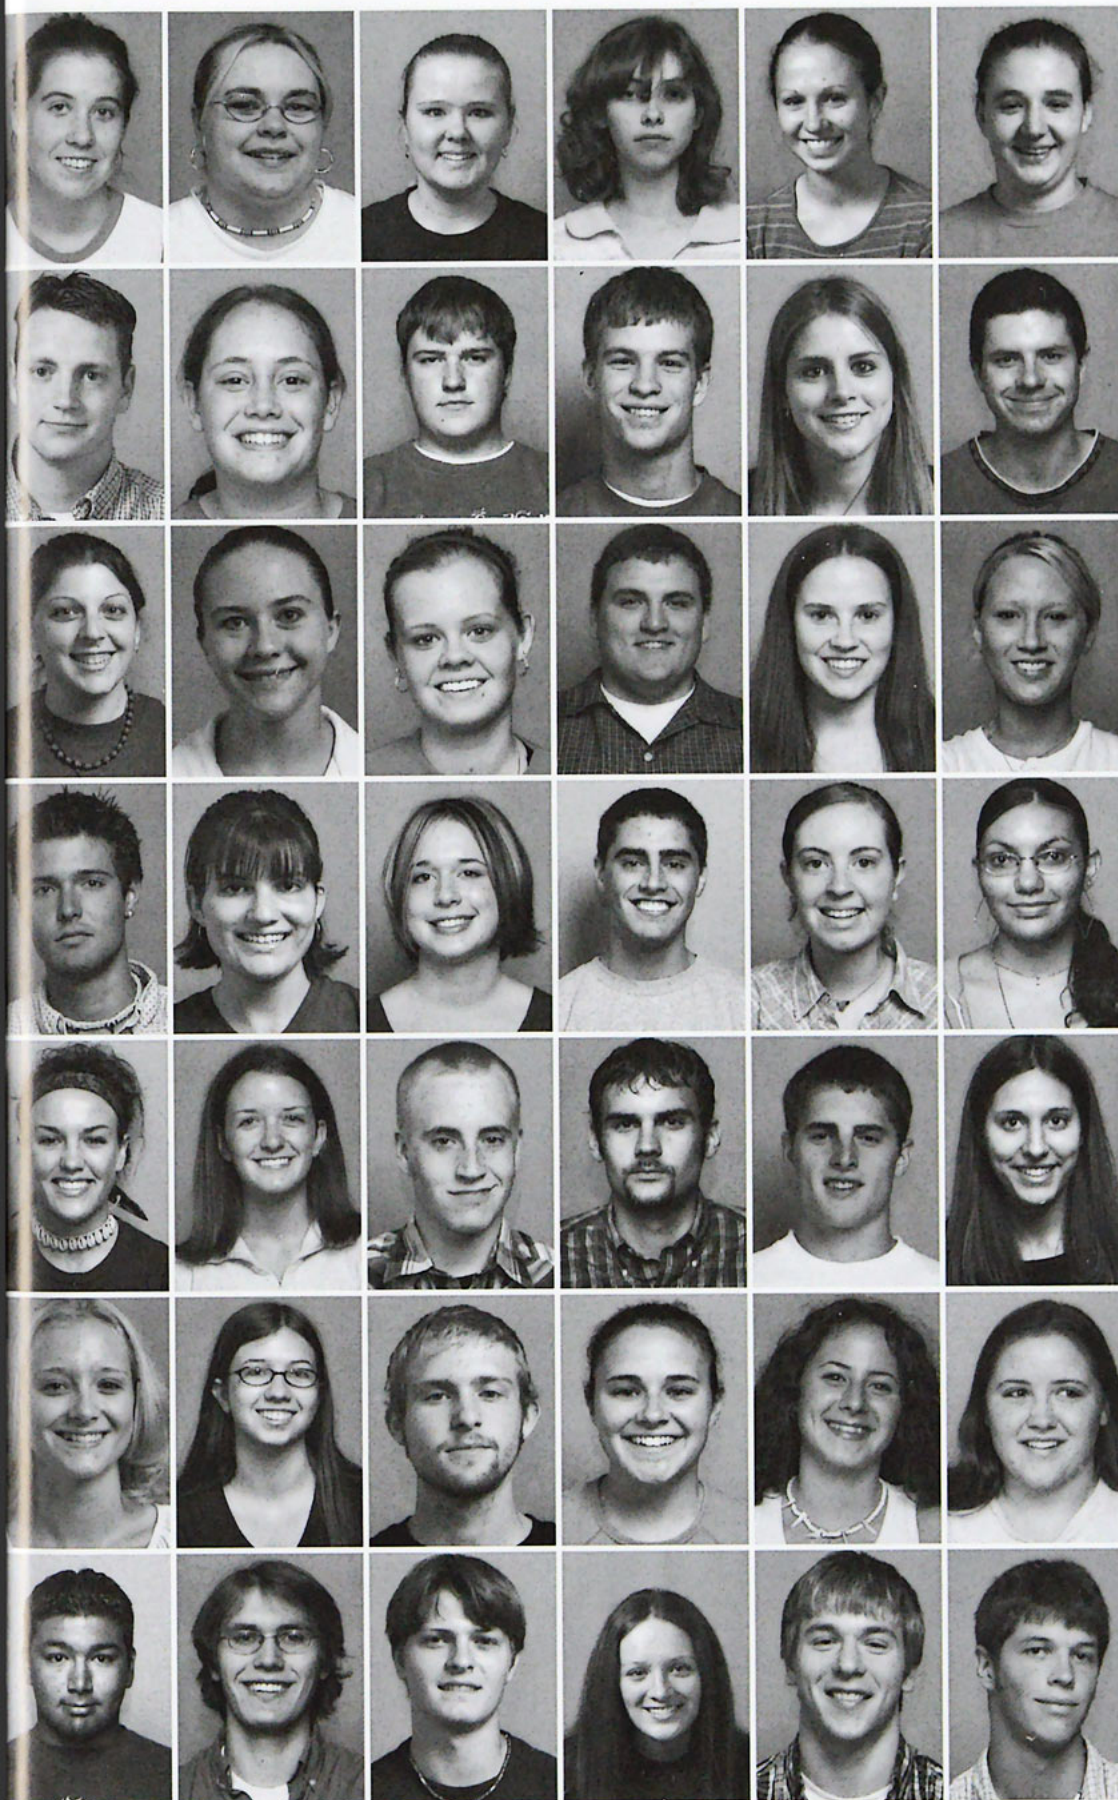

Furthermore, there have been enough puzzling and nonsensical comments to make even the greatest scholars ponder. I guess the artful scribes have a secret of their own in the story of the Rock.

Who would ever have guessed a rock could gain so much popularity? Who would have thought spraying paint on a rock could be fun? Apparently, it is. If you have not painted the famous Rock, it's about time that you do. The Rock is free game for anyone that attends Northwestern. Go paint the Rock today and become part of Northwestern history. There will be something to share with your grandchildren someday.

Who Turned Out the Lights?

School was cancelled on September 22, 2003 due to an occurrence that happened during a routine delivery by a US Foods Company truck to Nazareth Cafe. As the truck was leaving campus, the driver decided to cut through the Nazareth Hall parking lot instead of backing out the way it came. His shortcut soon became a small disaster as his truck hooked the power lines that hang over the lot. The delivery truck ended up catching three power lines and pulling down two support poles, instantly knocking out power to the entire Northwestern College campus for the better part of a day.

The occurrence happened right after chapel, so many students were eating lunch in Nazareth Cafe when they were suddenly surrounded by darkness. "I thought they had burned something in Naz at first, but when I went outside and saw what happened I had to laugh," said Junior Jon Stankevitz.

Senior Tim Anderstrom was in the cafe when the power went out. The announcement that classes were cancelled did not come immediately after the incident so a few unlucky students had to attend their dimly lit classes. Junior Pat Hermes said, "I was in the H-Peck for class when the power went out. Nobody could see anything; we were using the lights from our cell phones to find our way around the building."

On the other hand, Trisha Cleveland, a senior, wasn't very upset about going to class. She stated, "I don't know, I liked having class in the dark...it was easier to take a nap."

Despite all the confusion going on inside, a bigger mess was being dealt with outside. The fallen power lines and poles had strategically chosen a few unlucky cars as their victims. Though many cars received some sort of minor damage, two cars took the majority of the damage. The owners were Kelsie Carlson and Sara Tonneson, both seniors at NWC. "My car is totaled," said Carlson. Her car reportedly had a value of $2,300.

Currently there is a battle going on between US Foods and the electric company, each placing the blame on the other party. "The truck driver is saying he is not responsible for hitting the lines and pulling down the two poles," said Carlson, "It's ridiculous."

On a positive note, Carlson said that Northwestern has been great in the way they have handled the situation. She is currently driving a school-owned minivan to get to school and to her job.

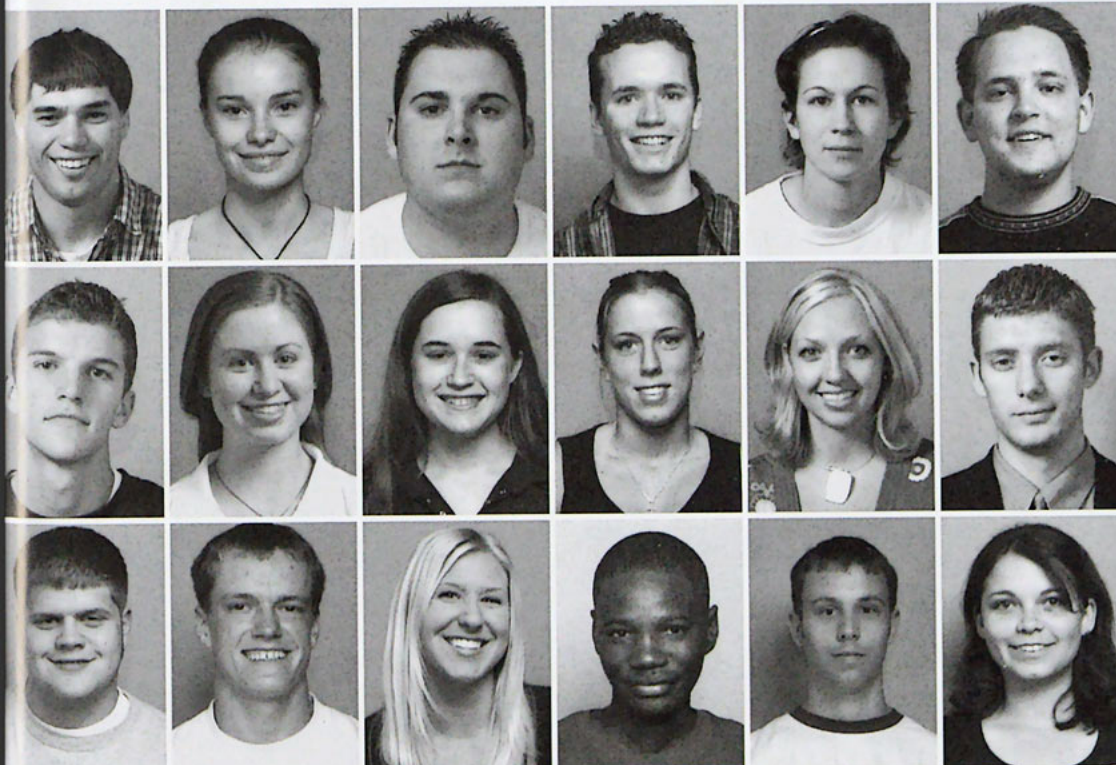

Junior Nate Jasper was especially shocked by what he saw in the parking lot. His comment was, "As a union construction worker I have dealt with a lot of experience truck drivers, and the only words to describe this is ignorance and inexperience."

Despite the damage and the subsequent battle due to this unfortunate incident, some students readily point to the positive. Rachel Smith, a senior, speaks for most when she commented, "I was really excited that I didn't have to go to class!"

An unexpected day off school is always nice, although the power outage was fixed by the next day and classes resumed as normal. The occurrence was a learning experience for everyone involved. God was definitely watching over everything and we are all thankful the outcome wasn't any worse.

"Go Therefore and Make Disciples of all Nations..."

Matthew 28:19

The Country: Ecuador has to be one of the most geographically diverse countries in the world, with the Amazon on the east, coastal plains on the west, and the Andes in between. In the capital city of Quito, there stands a 3-year old partnership with CJB World Radio and Northwestern College. Having started the school in 1982, Northwestern has just recently come along with HCJB in 2001.

The Students: With a one building campus and an average of 36 students, don't let the size distract you. Although many students come from Ecuador, there are also students attending from Columbia, Spain, and even Cuba. A graduating student earns a 2-year Associates of Art degree with an emphasis in Broadcasting Electronic Media.

Their Hope: With a lack of trained professors in the area of science and math, Northwestern hopes to soon offer a program that will allow our professors to travel to Ecuador to teach. The program would also allow Northwestern students to spend a semester studying on the Quito campus.

Their Mission:

One thing this predominately Roman Catholic country needs is native evangelists. The school strives to train students to spread the gospel throughout Latin America by means of radio, television, and journalism. With a big goal in mind, this small (in size, but not in heart) campus is helping to continue the Great Commission given to all.

Mission Accomplished by Hallie Stork

Fourteen students from Northwestern had the opportunity to travel on a missions trip to Guatemala over Spring Break. Kody Friesen, a junior at NWC, was one of the fourteen students to participate in building new houses for children with HIV and also visit the streets to minister to the young children during the week spent in Guatemala. Friesen was having such a wonderful time in Guatemala, he decided to stay a few days longer than the rest of his teammates. In reality, this was not by his own choice, but by God's sovereign will due to his having trouble getting clearance on his Canadian Visa and was required to stay in the country until he received his new Visa. "I was sad I couldn't finish the rest of the trip with my team, but I was excited for the adventure I had ahead of me," quoted Friesen.

The extra days Friesen spent in Guatemala, he was able to hang out with the children he had met during the week, shop at different markets, and go exploring in the colorful jungle. The complications were taken care of within a few days, and Friesen was able to return back home. Friesen stated, "I made it home after all the excitement, I have decided to take a second trip this June to do more missions work in the country of Guatemala." God still works in mysterious ways!

The Year of the Ice Palace

On Thursday, January 23, the 2004 Ice Palace opened its icy gates to the public. Over 27,000 people made up this breathtaking display of architectural wonder. After a twelve-year hiatus from the Ice Palace, it was a much-anticipated attraction. The Ice Palace is part of the Winter Carnival. The Winter Carnival also includes ice sculptures, ice-skating rinks, royal coronation, disc golf tournaments, cat shows, a parade, and the usual Minnesotan pleasures: fried foods and mini-doughnuts.

In order to build this spectacle, about 3000 volunteers from across Minnesota were needed. This also included a team of 20 volunteer architects from the Minneapolis firm SSL/Leo A and 250 volunteer union electricians. The task of completing the palace was undoubtedly an amazing challenge. Each ice block can support 800 pounds of pressure per square inch. The ice blocks were individually sawed from Lake Phalen in nearly perfect uniform size.

Not only is the Ice Palace breathtaking because of its architecture, it also boasts an amazing light and sound show. The Palace is illuminated with bright flashes of color, perfectly choreographed to energized music.

Even though the temperatures were nearly below zero, it was easy to find enjoyment walking around looking at amazing sculptures made entirely out of ice and snow. The return of the Ice Palace was a frigid experience with a warm welcome.

A Noble Cause

We want to thank everyone who helped with making the blood drive such a success this year. Whether you gave blood or helped set everything up or take equipment down, it is appreciated. Since blood is obviously a necessity, we appreciate all the help given to collect blood and give to the people who need it. For some of you, giving blood was as easy as sticking your arm out and waiting to get your treat. However, since giving blood isn't always that easy for everyone, we especially thank those who had a difficult time giving blood. Whether you ended up elevating your feet, putting ice behind your head, breathing into a paper bag, or fainting, we thank you for your time and effort in helping to save another life who is in need. Your act of heroism has not gone unnoticed.

We also hope that you had a positive experience and will consider giving again. Since blood cannot be stored forever, there is a constant need to always be replenishing the supply. If you have never given blood before, I suggest you go out today and help to save a life because you never know if you will someday be in need of other's help as well. If you have already given blood before, go out and continue to make a difference. Thanks again and we hope to see even more of you next year.

Notes from the President

Leading an organization at Northwestern is a huge task that is not taken lightly by Dan Cureton, current President of Northwestern College. When asked how much time he spends preparing for a year of leadership at NWC, Cureton stated, "I usually take several months and days to go about planning for the year. Long range planning is a major part of my day."

To those who think being president is all play and no work, think again. President Cureton follows a strict plan for moving NWC in the right direction. "My plan is simple. First, create a plan for the long term." This is what he calls the Long Range Strategic Plan. "Second, establish goals to accomplish the plan." These are the six priority areas. "Third, create strategies to fulfill each goal. Then, do it."

Although these long-term plans are all well and good, Cureton wants to make sure that the overall goal is seen in his years at NWC, however long that may be. "I guess if I could name the most important goal every year at Northwestern, it would be to make sure that God is glorified first and foremost in all Northwestern does. If every other goal failed, we want to make sure that this goal is the one that is maintained."

The President is certainly doing his job well and rather unabashedly discussed plans of building projects that he foresees in the near future. "We are planning on renovating Riley Gym into academic space, maybe including some support space. The addition of the Mel Johnson Media Center has also been significant to the overall quality of campus life. We have more parking available for faculty. This has been huge. We are also pursuing some options for student housing, most of it near the campus. Additional parking spaces are being planned, but further planning needs to be done before we put our ideas down on paper."

This, will most likely come as good news to many students, especially commuters, who as of yet, still must walk across campus to many of their classes, even to those as far away as the Mel Johnson Media Center.

The President is also working very hard to make life at Northwestern firmly grounded under the Lord's leadership to make it the best educational and spiritual experience a student can have.

President Cureton stresses the focus being on the Lord and not anything else. He lives his life by Micah 6:8 which states, "He has showed you, O man, what is good. And what does the Lord require of you? To act justly and to love mercy and to walk humbly with your God." Let us continue to pray for him and his wife as he desires to act in obedience to Christ.

"I am continually humbled to be able to serve the Lord at Northwestern as president, for it is only by His grace and love we are who we are. I will continue to give my best efforts to promote the firm foundation at Northwestern, but ultimately, the greatest goal is to glorify the Lord in all that Northwestern achieves, president and students alike."

Thank you Dr. Cureton for your commitment to the success of each student at Northwestern and even more for your desire to honor the Lord in all you say and do. It is a privilege to have you as our President.

Finishing the Last Lap Strong

"Therefore, since we are surrounded by such a great cloud of witnesses, let us throw off everything that hinders and the sin that so easily entangles, and let us run with perseverance the race marked out for us." Hebrews 12:1

A Few Last Words

Interviews with Seniors

What attracted you to NWC?

- "When I first came to North Western, I knew this is where God was calling me to go. I loved the beautiful campus and the friendly people! I also felt that NWC was spirit-filled."

- "The friendly people and the beautiful architecture!"

- "The emphasis on Christ in the classroom."

- "NWC attracted world-class scholar professors in Biblical languages and theology, the area which I desired to study in, which was informal and driven by a Christian worldview."

What was your favorite aspect of NWC?

I loved chapel, and I really enjoyed bonding with girls in the gym. Chapel is what sets us apart from other schools. If we didn't have chapel, we'd be no different than other colleges. "

- "I got engaged while a student here."

- "The unique combination of academic and spiritual creates an atmosphere fostering growth."

- "Getting to know a lot of great people and having such great friends; as well as meeting my wife."

- "The Godly atmosphere and the encouragement of students."

Who was your favorite professor and why?

- "Dr. Wahl - his personal stories of his family and his practice really helped the Psych. students feel close to him and it helped us understand the field of Psychology much better. Dr. Wahl could always laugh too! He always laughed at himself."

- "Mark Muska - his genuine love for the Word and the students was evident in his teaching."

- "This question is impossible to answer, but Dr. Helseth, Dr. Caneday, Dr. Huffman, Dr. Seevers, Dr. Muska, Dr. Morgan, and Dr. Glennly each have spent valuable time both in and out of the classroom helping me to think Biblically in all things, since we have the mind of Christ."

- "Dr. Andrea-Winslow - she really pushed us to new levels and was like a friend. She prepared me for what's after graduation."

What will you never forget about NWC?

- "The excessive parking tickets."

- "When the chemistry class watched Dr. Crane throw sodium metal in the lake on the last day of class. The explosion was pretty memorable!"

- "Praisealleluia guy, the rock, and my friends."

- "The friends, the Christian fellowship, the Godly example of the faculty and staff."

- "Dean Paulson's final sermon on Matthew!"

What would you like to thank NWC for?

- "For giving me an academic framework for viewing the world."

- "An honest, Godly President Alan Cureton, and the excellent library access to Clicnet."

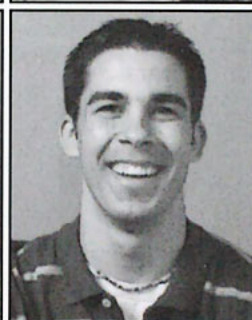

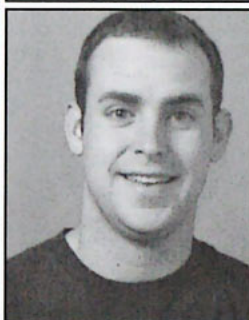

- "Its Christian standards; giving me some amazing experiences - shaping, molding, and teaching me."

- "A great Christ-centered education and quality friendships."

Student Teaching

Sticky fingers, papers galore, practical jokes, disrespectfulness, and stress are all only a minor piece in the day in the life of a student teacher. The expectations are high, and the stress levels could cause a heart attack. Student teachers are required to perform the duties of a normal teacher for an entire semester, but without being paid.

Whether the student teacher is working with kindergartners or seniors in high school, he/she encounters many of the same daily tasks. Those tasks include such things as planning lessons, grading papers or assignments, interacting with students, attending staff meetings, and meeting the expectations and standards of a teacher.

When you think back to your younger years and remember your favorite teacher, I bet you never dreamed that they put in that much time to make the day enjoyable for you. Many student teachers arrive at school between 6:30 a.m.-8 a.m. and don't leave until 4 p.m. or later.

Imagine a semester with no income - that is the reality of a student teacher. Student teachers are encouraged not to work at any job during their time spent as a student teacher. The school believes that the time that would be spent working should be spent planning and perfecting lesson plans for their class. Many of these students might believe otherwise when it comes time to fill their car with gas, go to a movie on a Friday night, or especially when it comes time to pay their monthly rent.

Various student teachers have commented that the experience is just like teaching except that someone is watching over your shoulder, and that the experience prepares students for the reality of teaching a classroom. Net working and building relationships within the school administration and faculty have been key factors for many students in finding a future teaching position. This experience is vital because these very students walking the halls of Northwestern could be the teachers of our future children; we want them to be the best they can be.

Ironical Incident

By Eric Litke

"Nothing interesting happens to me."

I will never again be able to say those words.

The event that banished this phrase from my vocabulary began on Saturday afternoon, Jan. 31. I was ready to leave for church at 4 p.m., so I headed down to my parking space that used to hold my green Saturn. Now, it held, well, snow. I came to the immediate conclusion that my car was missing.

As my mind began playing through potential scenarios, I slowly realized that there wasn't one that made sense. I had never loaned out my car to anyone, and both of my keys had been on my person for the last 24 hours. I was in a legal parking spot, so the car hadn't been towed.

I checked the other campus lots, thinking that maybe a roommate had moved it during the night as a joke. Nothing.

Since it was now past 4:30, I borrowed a friend's car and went to church, wondering what I would discover when I got back.

Returning from church, I drove through the parking lot behind the dorms. Sure enough, there was my car, parked facing forwards (I had backed in the night before) in a spot about two down from where I'd left it. Upon closer inspection, I found that the windshield had been cleaned and the CD changed as well.

Aside from these nuances, though, my car was fine. Nothing was missing, and no significant mileage had been put on it. So now I was really confused. Who had a key, how did they get it and how often were they planning on using it from now on? Since the "Club" was an expensive option, I decided to disable the car the old-fashioned way: I disconnected the battery cables.

Feeling somewhat more assured about the security of my car, I went to bed Sunday night.

At this point, the action switches to two new characters, I will call them John and Steve. I call them that because those are their real names.

Oh, did I mention that John's car is a green Saturn?

Since John had just recently purchased his car, Steve did not know what it looked like. John had simply told Steve that his car was a "stick-shift green Saturn." That should be sufficient, right? After all, how many green Saturns with a manual transmission can there be in that small area of the parking lot? Well, two for sure.

Snow had been falling that day, so it was not readily apparent to Steve that two cars in the lot fit the description he had been given. Walking over to the first and only green Saturn he saw, he opened the door, got in, started it up and drove to work. Yes, that's right, started it up. Car manufacturers make keys in cycles, so every so often there will be keys that are compatible between different vehicles. The odds are that our two Saturns, made 10 years apart, would have compatible keys, are of course absurd, but obviously not impossible.

Upon his return to school, Steve mentioned something to John about the strange noises his car makes. John replied that he had just bought his car and assured him that it did not make any strange noises. Steve, however, had just driven a car that made very strange noises (my car has, um, personality), and insisted that John's car did indeed have an unusual rattle.

So the next day (Sunday afternoon) the two decided to take John's car out for a spin, each 100 percent confident he would prove the other wrong.

Walking down to the parking lot, Steve led the way to the green Saturn he had driven the day before.

"Um, that's not my car," said John.

"Yes it is."

"No, it's not."

"Well, that's the car I drove to work yesterday."

John then walked over to his green Saturn and started it.

To prove that he knew what he was talking about, Steve took the spare key, walked over to my car, and started it.

Suddenly, it dawned on the two what had happened. "Oh man, I stole this guy's car!" exclaimed Steve, "Whose is it?"

To answer this question, John and Steve enlisted a friend (who we'll call Josh) to call around Moyer dorms to find out who car it was.

Posing as campus security, this friend began calling rooms to ask, "Do you know who on this hall has a green Saturn?" The third person he called had his answer: Eric Litke (that's me).

And so, it was that as I sat down to lunch on Monday, two guys came over to me.

"Hey Eric. We, uh, need to talk to you about something," Steve began. "This is John and he owns a green Saturn..."
